News from the Kingfishers

Firstly, thank you to everyone for making me feel so welcome at Threshfield School. I have enjoyed getting to know the children in Kingfishers during this busy half-term. Much of our creative art work has been inspired by the topic 'Arctic animals' and indeed the cold, snowy weather we have been having! The children have designed and made snowmobiles, created igloos out of sugar cubes and played with small world animals in ice. Whales have been the central theme in literacy and we have enjoyed a variety of stories and information books. The children have been number detectives and have been solving problems involving addition. Well done Kingfishers for working so hard this term!

News from the Curlews

What a busy half term the Curlews have had! It's been fraction frenzy for 5 weeks with all children developing a good understanding of the concept of fractions. Our Anglo-Saxon topic has linked perfectly with literacy where the children have used Saxon myths and legends to inspire their own incredible writing. The children loved designing and making their own Anglo-Saxon pots and we're really excited about our Viking enrichment day next term!

News from the Red Kites

In Red Kites pupils have been working really hard on fractions and decimals in Maths. In Literacy they have been researching information and presenting it in a variety of ways; describing characters and settings; reading with a focus on developing comprehension, particularly inference skills. In topic they have been researching different settlers and invaders: Romans, Anglo-Saxons, Vikings and have even made their own Anglo-Saxon Helmets.

We wish you all a very happy and relaxing half term break and look forward to welcoming you back on Monday 19th February.
